

Big AppleParent

August 2012

NYMETROPARENTS.COM

New Places, New Programs

Fred Marcus Photography

Tots rock out to apple seeds' Songs for Seeds music class, which is led by a three-piece band and encourages kids to sing and play instruments like drums and accordions.

construction to science, cooking, dinosaurs, and superheroes. All parties can now be booked completely online with apple seed's automated birthday planner. Allison Schlanger and Alison Qualter Berna, along with their husbands Craig and Robert, founded apple seeds' flagship 25th Street location in Chelsea to create a fun and safe play space for kids. They are very excited about the new location, they said, citing the Upper West Side's family-friendly feel and warm sense of community.

The new apple seeds is located at 200 West End Ave., between 69th and 70th streets. For more information about about apple seeds, visit applescedisplay.com or the play space's new blog, blog.applescedisplay.com.

apple seeds Opens New Location on Upper West Side

By Richard Stile

An award-winning play space for children, apple seeds, has opened a second location on the Upper West Side. The site features a nearly 2,000-square-foot playground, classrooms, and birthday party options. The all-in-one play space is a clean, safe, and fun environment to families with children from newborn to 5 years old offering classes for in music, art, science, construction, cooking, dance, and gym, as well as gentle separation classes and those that combine art and sports for the well-rounded little one. Tots can play sports like hockey, tennis, golf, and gymnastics, all on child-size equipment. And because caregivers are encouraged to participate, the classes give parents a great opportunity to spend time with their children.

The play space also offers 11 birthday party themes ranging from music, princess and pirate costume, and superheroes. All parties can now be booked completely online with apple seed's automated birthday planner.

Allison Schlanger and Alison Qualter Berna, along with their husbands Craig and Robert, founded apple seeds' flagship 25th Street location in Chelsea to create a fun and safe play space for kids. They are very excited about the new location, they said, citing the Upper West Side's family-friendly feel and warm sense of